These will be kept to keep up with the news, and the progress of a series. We are precipitated into the country by Southern Democrats, because of the election of Lincoln, would do well to subscribe for our "Whig."

Lincoln's changed to be an indication of the policy he intends to pursue, it promises to be conservative and pro-slavery. It is essential to us, as members of a movement, and it is not and can't be Union soldiers, because of the enforcement of all good old North and South. We are willing to let Mr. Lincoln, under the auspices of this Address, promising a deal when he attempts to inaugurate oppressive and unconstitutional measures, whether in reference to slavery or any other subject.

I believe that the goal of the anti-slavery party at the North has not yet arrived, and that the Northern States have come in peace against the greater portion of abolitionists. I shall battle against the Greater Garrisonians, Sumner, Chase, Bates, Brothman, and Friends, and with equal freedom, I shall do all who are here and give with the Yankees, Abolition, Friends, and with like-minded, and other Dissenting South, who seek to destroy this Government, from equally base motives.

Strength of Fort Pickens.

A private battle will be fought at Fort Pickens, and it may be expected to come off early. The insurgents are working night and day to fortify their position, destroying their gun-boats, and cutting off supplies, fuel, ammunition, artillery, and hospital stores. The garrison of the Fort are men first class and second, the former are of white and deep drift, communicating with them, surrounds the entire work, and is protected by a committee of friends.

The garrison command the postions of the insurgents, from all sides, allogating to the Fort. If a conflict comes we expect it will, when the garrison is most unprepared.

giving with holy triumph on the shining prouess before her. She called her husband and friends around her, and among them were her brothers who had come to see her, to see her, and gave them to meet her in heaven when she died. "I am ready, and willing to go." After a moments pause, she added: "I should be sorry, too, if I were not able to speak, for I said that I am gone home to rest. Dismissing her friends weeping, she exhorted them not to weep for her who was called away from this suffering world; then leaving her eyes upon her brothers said: "Tell my mother, farewell, tell her I am gone, and to meet me there."

How near her kind friends were to her heart. How dear her heart broken brother, who had been the partner of her joys and tears. What faith that the Christian could break these strong ties. But it was the will of God; it bowed submission, and a few days after, the mate of sorrow burst from his vision; the eternal day broke forth, and she passed in the Paradise of God.

STAYED BY VIRGINIA.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 22.—Tranquillity goes with Virginia, and is a quiet. Volunteers are raising in all parts of the State.

WALKER.

We find the following from the Petersburg Express, and give it to our readers in East Tennessee, to show what men will do and say under party excitement. And yet, this Dispatch is just as reliable as those sent here from Virginia.

The Home Guards.

A military company was organized here on Saturday last, styled the "Home Guards," by Unionists numbering 150 men. It is a free company, and was addressed by Col. Temple, after the officers were elected. This company does not propose to go into the service of either the North or South, but to stand firm on our soil, as a force, and to serve as a police to the corporate authorities of this land. The right spirit prevails here.
